

Prey Veng village, located within the Kulen Promtep Wildlife Sanctuary in Preah Vihear Province, offers an exceptional opportunity for nature enthusiasts and bird lovers alike. Nestled in the heart of Cambodia's rich biodiversity, this serene village serves as an ideal base for exploring the sanctuary's lush landscapes and diverse wildlife. Prey Veng is home to a variety of bird species, making it a must-visit destination for birdwatchers seeking to observe rare and endemic species in their natural habitat.

The Kulen Promtep Wildlife Sanctuary, one of Cambodia's largest protected areas, boasts a remarkable range of ecosystems, from dense forests to wetlands, creating a rich environment for birdlife. Notable species such as the endangered White-winged Duck, Giant Ibis, and other raptors can often be spotted soaring above the treetops or perched on the sanctuary's rich flora. Prey Veng village's proximity to the sanctuary's core areas provides birdwatchers with unparalleled access to these rare species, and the peaceful surroundings ensure a tranquil and immersive experience in nature.

In addition to its unique birdlife, the sanctuary's varied terrain offers a picturesque backdrop for birdwatching, with scenic views of rice fields, forests, and wetlands. Whether you're an avid photographer or a casual observer, the diverse landscapes provide excellent opportunities to capture the beauty of Cambodia's avian population. The best times to visit for birdwatching are during the cooler months, from November to February, when migratory birds flock to the region. Birdwatching in Prey Veng village in the Kulen Promtep Wildlife Sanctuary is a must for anyone looking to experience Cambodia's natural beauty and diverse wildlife in a peaceful, undisturbed setting.